

Tired of the same old marketing dance? Grab a Wallflower.

Wallflower turns this...

Trying to reach the masses in over-saturated marketplaces is tougher than ever, and you can go broke throwing money at the same advertising vehicles that worked a decade ago. That's why businesses are turning to in-house display systems to market to, and capitalize on, the captive audience in their stores, offices or restaurant waiting areas.

But if you think it's as simple as buying a TV and hanging it on the wall, think again.

That's where Wallflower comes in.

Into THIS!

Wallflower is a full-functioning micro computer that attaches inconspicuously to your flat panel monitor, so that you can deliver your own personalized videos, messages, information and marketing strategies via your HDTV to your captive audience.

Wallflower eliminates the need for a bulky dedicated computer, DVD player or digital projector to create your in-house display. And you can take advantage of Wallflower's built-in features to schedule different displays at different times -- creating endless marketing possibilities!
